

Community Reinforcement Approach

Supporting Psychological Interventions Across Scotland

Stirling Management Centre, University of Stirling, Stirling FK9 4LA

Tuesday 25 - Thursday 27 January 2011
10.00am – 5.00pm each day

The Community Reinforcement Approach (CRA) is a well-established, evidence-based intervention designed to help people make changes in their alcohol and drug use. With its emphasis on helping people create a lifestyle that they would choose over alcohol and other drugs, CRA incorporates the principles of recovery into a structured intervention. CRA was designed to blend reinforcement management with a social systems approach, with an emphasis on working with complex, multiple areas of need.

Delivered by
Dr Robert Meyers

Further information about the course is available from:

Dr Laura Freeman

Educational Projects Manager, Psychological Interventions Team
NHS Education for Scotland.

T: 0131 220 8680 E: Laura.Freeman@nes.scot.nhs.uk

Please complete the attached application form and return it to the Psychological Interventions Team booking email: pিতেambookings@nes.scot.nhs.uk

This event is a part of a programme of training offered by the Psychological Interventions Team of NHS Education for Scotland, with the aim to promote and enhance recovery-orientated systems of care for people with alcohol and other drug problems by providing high quality, evidence-based training in psychological interventions.

This event is funded by NES and a limited number of places with overnight accommodation will be available to increase the accessibility for remote and rural areas within Scotland.